

MANDULIS

ART

GENERAL CLEANING AND MAINTENANCE RECOMMENDATIONS FOR METAL SURFACES

Introduction:

Thank you for purchasing a MANDULIS product. You are now in possession of a genuine handmade product. In order to prevent this premium item inadvertently losing value, we recommend that you observe the following instructions for proper handling.

Customarily, the metals we use are very resistant to chemical impacts caused by dirt or weather (heat, cold, moisture, etc.). However, it should be noted that this resistance relates to the material itself, and not to the individually designed surfaces.

The chosen surface baseplate remains substantially unsealed after the final treatment (satin finish, bluing, etc.) and to the choice of metal reacts accordingly with the "environment" in different ways (patina, rust, visible marks through grease, chemicals, and the like). These reactions are part of the surface properties and thus represent no reason for complaint

Routine care:

Due to the natural formation of patina, no special instructions for care are to be considered. The natural patina forms depending on the strain put on the upper surface in a variety of qualities. Surface cleaning is possible with a damp, clean cloth (cotton).

Heavy soiling:

Heavy soiling can best be softened with brake cleaner or silicone remover and then taken off by using a soft (cotton) cloth (Do not use wire wool or scrub sponges!). Intensive rubbing can abrade the natural patina of the surface, thus a change of the surface structure may occur.

Scratches:

Through everyday use, the formation of small scratches on much-used surfaces comes naturally as a result. These slight scratches darken after some time and thus form again a part of the natural patina. Therefore, slight scratches present few problems worth consideration. With impacts that result in deep scratches, we recommend that you contact the MANDULIS team. We are happy to help and provide the appropriate advice.

For further information regarding surfaces and their cleaning and care, please contact us at the contact information listed below. Enjoy your product!

Best wishes to you from the Mandulis team.